The HT075 75-pound tumble dryer from Huesbch provides vended laundry store owners the ability to “create an appealing environment while increasing revenue,” the company says.

The HT075 features the company’s Galaxy 600™ control system, which allows operators to modify the dryer’s cycle, temperature, price and time, as well as manage peak customer usage with customizable time-of-day pricing, according to the company.

The machine’s heater box, combined with a concentrated air-flow pattern, also helps to lower utility usage and to “get satisfied customers out the door quickly,” according to Huesbch.

The company adds that the system is completely programmable from an Internet-connected computer, allowing store owners to remotely manage their business.

The HT075 is now available in three control-panel overlays (called Cityscape, Citron and Slate), and is also available in a Halo chrome door-ring option and a polished chrome door handle, allowing store owners to customize the machines to their store’s look.
